

City thanks MTA for surplus van

The City of Shelton expressed gratitude to Mason Transit Authority for donating a surplus van for use by the city's Municipal Court Community Service program.

The Shelton City Commission on Monday presented a letter to Mason Transit Authority's board of directors, which was read aloud.

"As you became aware, the program's van was in serious need of replacement since it has been transporting community service work crews to and from worksites in the city since 1991," the letter states.

The letter continues, "We truly appreciate the value you place on giving back to the community, and also believe in the good stewardship of the local taxpayers' dollar. In this case, the van will continue to be used to benefit the citizens of Shelton through the great work of the Community Service program. Thank you again; the van will be put to good use."
